

The partisan politics involved in Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election violates the public trust that enables them to use the public airways free of charge. It is a clear example of the danger of letting corporate bottom line interests dominate the decisions of broadcasters.

Obviously Sinclair Broadcasting realizes that the Bush administration rewards loyalists over the interests of the public. It must be stopped from showing this anti-Kerry, and thus anti-Democratic Party "documentary" before the election.

Sinclair's public show of support for Bush in airing this documentary should be actively discouraged by the FCC.
